

Summary of WTS China Internship - Nora

My internship at WTS is coming to an end. During this valuable internship, I have gained an in-depth understanding of how tax consulting firms deal with multinational tax issues, accumulated rich practical experience, and enhanced my professional knowledge. I will review my gains in WTS from the following three aspects.

I. Professional and high-level working partners

During my internship, I was fortunate to work with a group of colleagues with a very high professional level. The seniors not only have an in-depth understanding of tax laws and regulations but also have the ability to flexibly use this knowledge to provide clients with accurate financial and tax advice. Whether faced with complex tax issues or complicated tax analyses, they were always able to quickly find the key to the problem and propose practical solutions. In the process, I learned that regulations should be found in accordance with evidence and with sources so that clients and related personnel can understand them better. In addition to professional skills and a sense of responsibility, I also need to have good communication skills when providing consulting services. Maintaining good communication with clients, understanding their needs accurately, and being able to explain complex tax issues to them in layman's terms are also important in my work. Teamwork is the most obvious thing that I feel when I participate in so many projects, especially the "Manzhouli" project, from the sorting out of relevant information, printing, and organizing, to the internal data accounting, reporting on the key points of the contract content, which requires the close cooperation of many links.

II. Ability to learn with the times

I am particularly impressed by the regular case sharing and discussion and English training activities organized by the company. During the sharing activities, I learned to write emails in a standardized way and to use the correct headings, symbols, and other words and phrases in the replies to the inquiries, which will serve as a reminder for me in my future work. In the classic case sharing, I learned that the work of tax consulting is not only limited to the application of relevant regulations and pricing methods, but it is also very important to understand the latest developments and trends of the client's industry and to know the latest supportive laws and regulations issued by the state, as well as the restrictive measures, in order to provide a more professional and powerful solution for the client.

III. Effective tools

During this period, I have a new understanding of the tools and methods of consulting related information. When searching for information on the Internet is inaccurate, it is better to call and consult directly with the authorities to get the latest implementation methods. At the same time, I paid attention to distinguishing the help or misleading information from non-authoritative information and completed the preliminary background research by combining multi-faceted, omni-perspective, and time dimensions. I also learned how to use tax tools such as authentication of VAT invoices.

This internship experience at WTS is a valuable asset in my life. I greatly benefited from the relaxing working atmosphere, mentors and friends, and the highly professional leadership team. At the same time, I also realized the importance and complexity of tax consulting work and cherished this rare internship opportunity even more. I will take this internship as a new starting point and will continue to demand and improve myself in my studies and work in the future. Looking ahead, I will continue to learn tax knowledge, constantly improve my professionalism, and accumulate rich practical experience. I will apply the knowledge and skills I have learned flexibly to practical work, and make continuous efforts to move forward to become a tax practitioner.
