As U.S.-China trade tensions intensify and global supply chains undergo restructuring, Chinese customs enforcement continues to tighten. Key areas such as commodity classification, origin determination, royalty fees, transfer pricing, processing trade, and bonded supervision have become "high-risk zones" for corporate import and export operations. Businesses engaged in international trade now face unprecedented compliance challenges and cost pressures, making customs compliance an increasingly critical issue in global trade and supply chain management.

At this seminar, we will explore current hot topics in customs audits and share insights on risk management and compliance strategies, including:

1. Latest trends in customs audits;
2. Common customs disputes—commodity classification, origin determination, royalty fees, and transfer pricing; and,
3. Case studies on customs compliance controversies.
